This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFATORY NOTE

THIS Catalogue contains the names of seven hundred and twelve persons, of whom six hundred and nineteen were elected as regular and ninety-three as honorary members. The deceased number forty-two regular and seven honorary members, leaving a total of six hundred and sixty-three living Signet men. A tabular list of the occupations of regular members from the classes of 1871 to 1901 shows the following result: Lawyers 178; Business men 103; Teachers 70; Physicians 41; Clergymen 27; Journalists and Writers 25; Artists and Architects 21; Miscellaneous 49.

The Frontispiece is a reproduction of the book-plate presented to the Society by James H. Hyde, '98.

The Seal incorporated in the design is described in the Records as follows:

Arms: Gules, a signet ring or, surrounded by seven bees of the same marked with sable.

Crest: From a fillet or and sable, a dexter forearm issuing, clothed in a sable sleeve with white cuff. The hand proper holding an open book with two clasps and edges or, across the pages of which is inscribed Veritas.

Motto: ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗΝ ΠΟΙΕΙ ΚΑΙ ΕΡΓΑΖΟΥ.

SIGNET LIBRARY

THE Library of the SIGNET has been increased during the last seven months from 399 volumes to 917 volumes. We have now several excellent sets of books, among which are:

Aldine Poets, 18 vols.
Balzac, 20 vols.
Boswell's Johnson, 10 vols.
Byron, 11 vols.
Defoe, 18 vols.
Dickens, 20 vols.
Ferrier, 6 vols.
Harvard Monthly (complete), 34 vols.
Hume & Smollett's England, 13 vols.
Inchball's Plays, 25 vols.
Kipling, 19 vols.
Lockhart's Scott, 10 vols.
Lowell, 13 vols.
Newman, 14 vols.
Poe, 6 vols.
Reade, 12 vols.
Scott, 48 vols.
Shakespeare, 9 vols.
Smollett, 12 vols.
Spectator, 8 vols.
Stevenson, 26 vols.
Swift, 19 vols.
Tennyson, 10 vols.
Thackeray, 30 vols.
Wordsworth, 7 vols.

There are in the Library only about 50 of the works of SIGNET men, and it is greatly desired that this number should be increased. Graduates are earnestly requested to send to the Librarian any books, particularly those which they have written themselves. Volumes of the Lampoon or Advocate would also be very welcome. The Librarian has secured a complete set of the Advocate excepting Volume 55, Number 10, the Commencement Number of 1893 and the Indexes for Volumes 55, 59 and 61 respectively.

THE BIRTH OF THE SIGNET

THE Class of 1871 was given to innovations. In its Sophomore year some among its members set on foot a society, intended to rival the time-honored "Institute," which for nearly or quite a century had qualified Sophomores for further social development. In its Junior year the same progressive persons attempted, with somewhat less success, to build them monuments more enduring than bronze by organizing a very stormy and short-lived secret society; and afterwards by reviving one of the Greek-letter fraternities, which had some years before died out at Harvard. In its Senior year this element in the class found a safe and salutary exercise for its energies in the formation of the Signet.

The latter came into the college world as the result of a disturbance of cyclonic intensity in class "politics." The founding of a second Sophomore society had not pleased the friends of the first, and partly for this reason, partly for others, some of the more eminently "up-to-date" members of the class found themselves not invited to join what was then the most esteemed of upper-class societies: thereupon they entered a comparatively humble rival, so that the latter quickly grew so large and lively that rather pronounced discords became perceptible in its interior, and finally a considerable fraction of its membership shook its dust from their feet.

Shortly after this grave incident it was at first rumored, afterwards ascertained, that the two societies had formed a "coalition," whereby the several class officers were apportioned between them, and such as fell to the lot of each were to be filled, in each case, by a majority vote of the society obtaining it, all the members of both being pledged to vote for all the nominees thus chosen. The two societies together included about 85 to 90 out of a class of 157, so that the sentiments of a considerable, although quite hopeless, minority on the subject were decidedly "sinistral." Their somewhat pronounced disapproval of the entire arrangement was accentuated by the calling of the Class Meeting, at which officers for Class Day should be chosen, several months before the accustomed date, the reason ascribed by rumor for this novelty being an apprehension on the part of those who had "engineered" the "coalition" lest it should be dissolved by the disintegrating influences of time and public opinion if its practical application should be long delayed. When the meeting had, in fact, been held, and the ticket "put through" as agreed, some of those who had constituted the "yeasty" element in the class were filled with a burning desire to do something which might show how little they liked all these proceedings: to this end the Signet was formed.

Its original constitution declared out of order any proposition tending to make conviviality or participation in class politics an object of its organization; the asceticism professed in thus placing on its Index Expurgatorius any suggestion of indulgence in pleasures of the table was intended as a condemnation of the lax morals in this respect then attributed by reports current among outsiders to the more notable of the "coalesced" societies. But the feeling of its founders was yet more unequivocally shown by a further provision of the constitution which prohibited in terms any member of the Signet from belonging to either of the bodies which had been in unholy alliance. Since then, owing to the softening influences of time, this prohibition has been expunged, but it was probably the most truly characteristic feature of the organization at its birth.

The Signet came into being as an essentially militant body: it existed that it might protest against evils of the day at Harvard; and a sort of crusading, self-asserting spirit marked it from the beginning: a mild joke in the "Harvard Advocate" suggested "a seal rampant" as an emblem for the new society. It believed itself to have, however, and experience has shown that it had, in fact, a broader mission than merely to remedy abuses in the choice of officers for Class Day. Among the fifteen who joined it in 1871 were some who knew little, and cared less, about the disputes and intrigues which had preceded the class election, but who felt strongly that a college society ought not to be a school of frivolity or snobbery, still less one of wire-pulling, and that some societies then existing might be described, un-charitably perhaps, but not altogether untruthfully, as but little better. These men had in view to found a society which should choose its members for real merit of some sort, and not for accidental advantages or mere good fellowship, and should be for them a source of moral and intellectual development, not of simple amusement.

This idea has proved sound and fruitful; it has corrected, with the aid of time, the bitterness which caused the society's birth, and found expression in some of its early laws; it has prevented the profession of higher purpose which it made from degenerating into conceit and self-righteousness. We may smile a little after thirty years at the earnestness with which we did our work as founders, but after all it was work of which we need not feel ashamed.

CHARLES J. BONAPARTE, '71.

THE SIGNET PAST AND PRESENT

THE successful aim of the founders of the Signet, in the remote time of the second year of President Eliot's administration, was "to establish in Harvard College a Senior society securing recognition of merit and offering opportunities for literary culture and social intercourse."

The founders believed there was room for the Signet. The important college societies of the time were the Pudding, which dated its origin in the preceding century and had a very great prestige, and another, which had an antiquity of some five years and considered itself the Pudding's rival. The joint influence of these two organizations over successive classes was felt to be objectionable by the projectors of the Signet, inasmuch as it was exercised through a sort of trust—named a "coalition" then—by means of which the honors of Class Day were distributed according to the will of the societies. In a way the Signet was a protest against this management of class politics, and so a reason may be discerned for the existence of its fourth organic rule, which barred Signet men from membership in either the Pudding or the Pi Eta. If the society was to be an effective protest it must have the undivided allegiance of its members.

That fourth organic rule, which came to be known as "the Pudding clause," was a source of much liveliness in more than a few Signet meetings, until it was abolished in 1887. Its abolition is the most important event in the whole history of the Signet.

The new society placed itself under other limitations: it could not have more than twenty-one members in a class; the first seven of these had to be chosen with considerable regard to the rank-list, and two votes against a candidate for membership were enough to reject him. These limitations made the Signet strong because they insured its being a homogeneous association: only men who believed in it and had similar tastes and ideals were likely to join it. They made it strong enough to maintain itself now and then without representation in a college class.

The society's first place of meeting was on the fourth floor of Dolton (afterward known as Hilton) Block, now Fairfax Hall. Here the name of Signet was chosen, and the gold and black colors adopted, together with certain emblems and a motto. The emblems were a signet ring enclosing a nettle, the significance of the one being understood as unity and concord, and of the other as impartiality. The motto was In hoc signo spes nostra, but eight years later the Signet of '79 adopted, with thanks to Professor Palmer for suggesting it, the present motto from the Phædo.

The Signets of '78 and '79 had considered medals and shingles at several meetings, and in the records "the ring, signifying unity and harmony; the thistle, independence," are called "the old emblems." Perhaps the Scotch associations of the Sig-net's name suggested the thistle; at any rate, though never formally adopted as an emblem, it was used for a while, until '81, by adopting the design of one of its members and having the die made from which the society's medal has since been struck, restored the nettle to its lawful place. In addition to the medal, the society now has an elaborate seal, which appears on its book-plate and over the porch of its house. This was devised by a member of '95 and adopted by the Signet of '02.

A year after organization the society removed from Dolton to 3 Holyoke House, whence after another year it passed to the rooms occupied some years before by the Psi Upsilon, on the third floor of Moore's Block, on Brattle Street. The founders and their successors of the next two classes had the prospect of better quarters, for the late Mr. Cyrus Wakefield had signified his intention of giving the College a new building, in which the Signet, provided it raised five thousand dollars toward the expense of construction, was to have a permanent home. The sum was pledged, and the records say that one October day in 1872 President Eliot and the architects were on the college grounds selecting a site for the structure. It was a great disappointment for the young society when Mr. Wakefield died without making legal provision to carry out his plans. This early hope of a permanent home was unrealized for almost thirty years.

The third-floor rooms in Moore's Block were the society's meeting-place about two years. Then it appeared impossible to secure members from '76. Although the class of '74 had already been passed over, and the Signet of the next year had been vigorous, it was thought inexpedient to maintain the society longer. The rooms were therefore given up, a Graduate Association formed, which took possession of the records and other property, and the Signet dissolved as an undergraduate organization.

The society, which seemed thus to have finished its career, was, however, almost immediately reëstablished. In the spring of 1875 certain members of the class of '77 made known their conviction of the need of such a society, and their desire to join it. Thereupon the members from '75 called a meeting of the Graduate Association which decided to commit the Signet to the care of the men of '77; and there was no difficulty in finding members until five years later, when the Signet of '81, after taking counsel with the graduates, determined to maintain the Pudding clause, pass over the class of '82, with the exception of three honorary elections from it, and entrust the society to '83.

The revived society of '77 hired rooms in the same building on Brattle Street in which the earlier Signet had met, but on the floor below; and here was the Signet's home until its removal in 1897 to the house on Mount Auburn Street.

Though, as has been mentioned, there was a Graduate Association formed in 1874–1875, the definite organization of the graduates occurred much later. When the first seven from '85 were received into the society, November 23, 1883, Mr. Drown, President of the '84 Signet, suggested the formation of an alumni association, and on the 11th of the following January, the occasion of the initiation of the second seven, when many graduates were present, a committee of five was appointed "to draw up a plan for the formation of a Signet Alumni Association," and to report on the next Strawberry Night, the annual festival, instituted June 8, 1877, by the Signet of '78. One may here digress long enough to quote from the records that "the Signet of '78 were very much gratified at the success of the first Strawberry Night, and all expressed the hope that the custom thus pleasantly begun may be kept up by succeeding classes," — as it has been.

In a circular sent out to past members of the society the committee suggested a plan of organization, which on Strawberry Night, June 16, was discussed, and after some amendment adopted. The Signet Alumni Association, which was then organized, has since, through its executive body the Council, done much to promote the welfare of the Signet. In 1902 the Council caused to be incorporated under Massachusetts law the Signet Associates, in whom is vested the title to the Signet's house and other property.

The prosperity of the society which began with the revived Signet of '77, and was scarcely interrupted by the passing over of '82, continued until after the celebration of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the College. The Signet and the O. K. together had the honor of providing the undergraduate literary parts of that occasion, and during the celebration a Signet dinner was held. Everything moved smoothly until history repeated itself and the Pudding clause stood in the way of securing the desired membership from '88. A motion to strike out the clause was lost, but on February 16, 1887, it was voted that it "be suspended so far as the election of members from '88 is concerned." So little was accomplished by this action, however, that a month later it was probable the control of the Society would be given over by '88 to '87, and a month later still (April 22) "the Signet of '88 having resigned active care of the society," the Consolidated Signet was organized. This consisted of graduates resident in the neighborhood together with the members from '87 and '88. "The organic rules of the Signet were declared to be the rules of the new organization," which was to have entire charge of the society until a regular Signet from a college class should be elected. "The suspension of the organic rule as to membership in other college societies was declared applicable only to members that have been or may be elected from '88." After another week the Consolidated Signet adopted the society's regular constitution, but on the 28th of October made considerable changes in it, as well as in the organic rules; and it was then that the Pudding clause was abrogated. The Consolidated Signet ceased to exist the 9th of December, by committing to the members it had elected from '89 the control of the society.

Since 1887 the Signet has been vigorously alive, although it can show no records for nearly six years after 1892, and the secretaries of the past five years have written much less voluminous history than their earlier predecessors. In 1897 it leased the house numbered 55 Mount Auburn Street, which the graduates helped to rearrange and refurnish, and which it occupied until 1902. In 1898 it adopted a revised constitution and organic rules, raising the limit of membership to twenty-eight from a class, and providing that the House Committee should always have a graduate member and that all constitutional amendments should be subject to veto by the Council.

The Alumni Association has through the Council rendered the undergraduates much service. It published the catalogues of 1886 and 1895, and has held largely attended annual dinners (and business meetings in connection with them), which have been graced and honored by distinguished guests. Through the years of occupancy of the Mount Auburn Street house, the Council kept in mind the desirability of the Signet's having a permanent home, and at the right time for securing it made a successful appeal to the alumni. This was when, with conspicuous generosity, Mr. J. H. Hyde, at the dinner of November 3, 1900—the Signet's thirtieth anniversary—offered the society ten thousand dollars toward a new house, on the single condition that it should raise ten thousand dollars more within a year. In acknowledgment of his munificence the graduates present conveyed their thanks to Mr. Hyde and pledged themselves to their best endeavor to meet his condition. The Council then made a general appeal to the alumni, and succeeded about a year later in securing the amount required, Mr. Hyde having meanwhile increased his gift by two thousand dollars. The house at the southeast corner of Mount Auburn and Dunster streets was purchased and much improved, and on the 22d of March, 1902, a hundred Signet men had the pleasure of dining there together and of listening to remarks by older and younger members.

Some of the ways of the Signet at different eras of its existence may be briefly mentioned. In the old times of the seventies original conundrums as well as essays and verses were demanded of members. For some years in the eighties it was the custom "to have a game of base-ball in the spring between the active members and the members of the preceding year." Initiations acquired their occasionally disconcerting character some time after the abrogation of the Pudding clause, and in the nineties new members, upon their reception into the society, were required to climb the post which rose from floor to ceiling in the old rooms, and were considerately "boosted" when gravitation acted too strongly upon them. It was in this period that members were subjected to a fine of two dollars for failure to prepare literary parts, and that the Secretary was required to present his minutes in rhyme. Now that the society needs books and has room for them, it is appropriate to recall that '79 and '90 added a number of volumes to the library, and to commend their action to the alumni, who if they would present copies of their own books (together with a few by other authors of repute) would help to relieve the present bareness of the Signet shelves.

The ways of the Signet have varied from time to time as it has been represented by successive classes; but it has steadily preserved its type and maintained the regard of the college world. Of the ideals of its founders it is in a fair way of being "a springing and germinant accomplishment" as long as Harvard College remains the most important part of Harvard University.

HORACE L. WHEELER, '81.

THE SIGNET HOUSE

FOR many years the meeting-place of the society was in Moore's Block, where it leased two rooms. Here, on Friday nights, some twenty or more undergraduates, with occasionally a handful of graduate students and University officers, used to gather for a cup of chocolate and an hour's talk. The secretary read his minutes to a good-natured audience, a college editor bored or entertained his fellows with an unedited manuscript, somebody played the piano, and everybody listened or talked according to the musician's skill or wish. For many years the Signet lived here contentedly, the rooms growing comfortably shabbier, and gathering about them pleasant memories and traditions. An old member coming back would notice a swarthier hue on the Venus over the piano, a grayer tint in the yellow ribbon across the portrait of the society's "First Consul." At last, however, in the summer of 1897 (I quote from a circular letter to the graduates), "The Signet, finding that the rooms which the society had now occupied for twenty-five years had become both shabby and dilapidated, and no longer a pleasant meeting-place for the literary and social intercourse which it is the purpose of the society to cherish in the undergraduate life of Harvard, determined by a unanimous vote of the resident members to hire a house for the following year, and leased No. 55 Mount Auburn Street. In taking this important step," the circular continues, "the members were animated solely by a desire to further the best interests of the society, and to give it at last a home worthy of the dignified position in Harvard which the Signet had held for more than a quarter of a century."

In this second home the society rested for a college generation; and during the four years the conviction of the necessity of a permanent home steadily strengthened among the younger members. At last, at the thirtieth annual dinner, a graduate of two years' standing offered to give half of such a sum as should be necessary to purchase a house and endow a library for the society, providing that the remainder of the sum be raised within a year. Among Mr. James H. Hyde's many benefactions to the University, not the least is this gift of his to the Signet. The sum was readily raised, and in the summer of 1901 the old-fashioned frame building on the southeast corner of Mount Auburn and Dunster streets was purchased from the trustees of the A. D. Club.

This final home of the Signet was built, so far as I can discover, in the last years of the eighteenth century; it was owned during the first quarter of the nineteenth by a Captain Bascom; then, in 1831, it was purchased by Mr. Charles Willard, from whom it descended to his son-in-law, Mr. George Sanders. Mr. Sanders sold it in 1877 to Mr. James Kernan, who in turn sold it to the A. D. Club in 1878. In 1881 an addition which nearly doubled the size of the building was put on, and during the twenty-three years the A. D. owned the house many alterations and other slight additions were made, always with a view to convenience and comfort, but not always with a clear vision of architectural taste or congruity. The pleasant, ugly, dark slate-colored building has been a familiar landmark to many generations of Harvard men. The Building Committee of the Signet, with adequate funds and a considerable antiquarian enthusiasm, at once determined to "restore" the house: in the words of the chairman of the committee, "It was not intended to restore the house as it originally was, but, rather, as it originally ought to have been." A Colonial balustrade, pilasters, and a pediment above the porch were added; new front doors were made, with eighteenth century latches and knockers; the hybrid "Queen Anne" bay-window, which the architects (Messrs. Cram, Goodhue, and Ferguson), whose sense of propriety was keener than the committee's, urged to have removed, was rendered as inoffensive as possible; and with white paint on its clapboards and bottle-green on its blinds, the ancient house resumed, or assumed, a pleasant quaintness and dignity. In the porch the early architectural solecism of the two orders, Doric and Ionic, has been jealously retained (it is due to the architects to say that it was again contrary to their advice); and above it, where a window used to be, is carved the seal of the Signet, in the style of the arms on Holden Chapel.

The interior arrangements, which are very simple, consist, on the first floor, of an entrance vestibule flanked by a small dining-room (16′ × 16′) and a reception-room of the same dimensions; a library (18′ × 40′), with shelf-room for 6000 volumes; back hallway, kitchen, steward's room, etc. The second floor, with the exception of a small writing-room, a pantry, and a toilet-room, is taken up with a single large apartment (36′ × 40′), in which, at the opening dinner, 110 men were comfortably seated at table. The rooms are finished in painted wood, with hardwood floors; the large assembly-room has — embarrassment of riches — four open fireplaces, the library two, and the other rooms one each. The whole interior was done over afresh in a carefully considered Colonial style.

At least one member of the Building Committee enjoyed every minute of the "reconstruction period," — even when one of the workmen cocked his eye at the little Phœbus Apollo and his horses which graced a newly arrived mantelpiece, and exclaimed, "Begad, it 's Ben Hur!"

CONSTITUTION AND
ORGANIC RULES

REVISED AND ADOPTED JUNE, 1898

PREAMBLE

IN order to establish in Harvard College a Society securing recognition of merit and offering opportunities for literary culture and social intercourse, we adopt the following

CONSTITUTION

ARTICLE I

The name of this Society shall be The Signet.

ARTICLE II

SECTION 1. The members of this Society shall be of three classes: Active, Associate, and Honorary.

SECTION 2. The Active Members shall be chosen from each College class in turn, and shall be Active Members of the Society during their Junior year, and during their Senior year until Officers shall have been elected by the succeeding class.

They shall not exceed in number twenty-eight from each class, and shall be elected, up to the number of twenty-one, in groups of seven.

They shall be, as far as possible, representative men of the class, and shall be chosen without regard to previous Society connections.

Of the first seven members from each class at least five shall have given, either in the College papers or in academic work, evidence of literary ability.

SECTION 3. The Associate Members shall be past Active Members desiring to remain connected with the Society. They shall not be eligible to office, and shall have no voice in elections.

SECTION 4. Any Alumnus of the University, any person not an Undergraduate distinguished for his interest in the University or in the purposes for which this Society has been founded, and any member of the Senior class may be elected an Honorary Member by unanimous vote of the Active Members.

Honorary Members shall have the same rights and privileges as Associate Members.

A member of the Senior class may be elected an Honorary Member only after his name has been presented to the Active Members, in writing, the nomination to be signed by at least three fourths of the Senior Members of the Society.

Not more than three Seniors shall be elected Honorary Members during a single academic year.

ARTICLE III

SECTION 1. All nominations for membership shall be posted at least one week previous to election.

SECTION 2. The choice of Active Members shall be by ballot: two negative votes shall reject.

ARTICLE IV

The officers shall be a President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and a Librarian.

They shall perform the usual duties of their respective offices.

The President and Treasurer are empowered and authorized to lease property on behalf of the Club for its use, and to sign agreements for the Club as its agents.

The Treasurer shall promptly forward to the Treasurer of the Signet Associates the sums due for rent of the Club-house.

The Secretary shall, immediately upon election of Officers or Members, notify the Secretary of the Graduate Council and send to him their names in full, their permanent addresses, and their addresses in Cambridge.

The Treasurer and Librarian shall be ex officiis members of the House Committee on behalf of the Undergraduate Society.

They shall be elected invariably from the Junior class, and shall be elected by members of their own class at the first regular meeting in October and in February.

ARTICLE V

SECTION 1. Regular meetings shall be held at intervals, not exceeding two weeks, which the Society shall from time to time determine.

SECTION 2. The President may call special meetings.

ARTICLE VI

No proposition to influence class elections, or to make conviviality or connection with any secret organization a principle of the Society, shall be in order.

ARTICLE VII

SECTION 1. No motion to suspend this Constitution as a whole or any part of it shall be in order.

SECTION 2. Any article of this Constitution may be amended by a two-thirds vote of all Undergraduate Members of the Society (Active, Associate, and Honorary), subject to the veto of the Council of the Graduate Association.

ARTICLE VIII

In the event of a dissolution of the Society, its archives shall be delivered over to the Secretary of the Graduate Association.

ORGANIC RULES

I

The members of the Signet shall preserve a proper reticence with regard to the Society's affairs.

II

The President shall read to every member to be initiated the Constitution, and shall then require of him a pledge as follows:

The President shall ask of each new member:

"Do you solemnly promise faithfully to conform to the Constitution and Organic Rules of the Signet, and to all regulations made under them; and to the observance of this promise do you pledge your honor as a gentleman?"

To this each new member shall answer:

"I do!"

III

To initiations all members shall be invited (Active, Associate, and Honorary) who shall have given notice in writing to the Secretary, or to his predecessor, of his desire to receive such notification; and the name and address of every such member shall be duly recorded in a book kept for the purpose, and invitations shall be posted to members at least twelve days previous to the date of the initiations.

To regular meetings all Undergraduate Members shall be invited, except when a regular meeting is to be devoted to the election of new members.

Special meetings, for Active Members only, may be called from time to time, at the discretion of the President or at the request of the Active Members.

IV

The literary and other exercises at the regular meetings shall be at the discretion of the President and the Secretary, forming a Committee of two.
The appointments, restricted to Active Members, shall be made two meetings in advance.

V

A motion to expel shall lie on the table for one week. In the meantime, the Secretary shall notify all the Undergraduate Members of the pending motion.
Expulsion of an Active Member shall require a five-sevenths vote of the Active Members.
Expulsion of an Undergraduate Associate Member or of an Undergraduate Honorary Member shall require a five-sevenths vote of all the Undergraduate Members.
The expulsion of any other member rests with the Graduate Association.

VI

Amendments to the Organic Rules shall be submitted in writing and shall be posted for two weeks.
To amend Rules I, III, and V shall require a unanimous vote of all the Undergraduate Members.
The remaining rules may be amended by a two-thirds vote.

VII

The initiation fee of Active Members shall be twenty dollars.
The annual dues for members in the Junior class shall be fifteen dollars. The annual dues for members in the Senior class shall be ten dollars.
Any member who, prior to his election, shall have declared to the President his inability to contribute to the funds of the Society may, by a majority vote of the Active Members, be exempted from payment of any fees, dues, and assessments. Such exemption shall not release a member from any obligation to the Society other than pecuniary, nor shall it exclude him from any rights and privileges whatsoever.

VIII

The First Seven Active Members from each class shall be elected not later than the first day of June in their Sophomore year, and shall be initiated not later than the day before Class Day.

At the first Regular Meeting in the following October, the First Seven shall elect a separate organization, electing officers from their own number.

They shall then proceed to nominate candidates for a Second Seven, which seven shall be elected at a subsequent meeting, after the nominations have been posted at least a week.

The initiation of the Third Seven shall take place not later than the last week in January.

IX

No one shall be informed of his election to Active Membership until after the President, or a member appointed by the President, has asked him if he is able and willing to meet the usual financial demands of the Society. Should he reply in the affirmative the Secretary may then proceed to formally notify him of his election. Should he reply in the negative, before any notification of election may be given him, it becomes necessary for the Active Members to vote on the question of his exemption from dues, as stated in Rule VII.

Only one man in seven may be so exempted.

Should the Active Members for good reason be unwilling so to exempt a man from dues, etc., his election may, by a majority vote of the Active Members, be declared null and void, in which case another shall be elected in his stead.

The initiation fees of Active Members and the annual dues of Active and Honorary Members are payable at their initiations.
The names of members delinquent in the payment of any fees, dues, or assessments, together with the amount owing, shall be posted on the bulletin-board by the Treasurer, one month after such payments are due, and shall remain there until the amount owing is paid.

X

The Treasurer and the Librarian shall be ex officiis members of the House Committee and Joint Standing Committee, composed of the Active Members of the Signet and members chosen by the Council of the Alumni Association.
The House Committee shall exercise the usual functions of such a body.
The Treasurer and the Librarian shall make written reports to the Society in February and in October.
The House Committee shall audit the reports of the Treasurer and the Librarian.

XI

A quorum shall consist of a majority of Active Members, except that in all cases in which Associate and Honorary Members have the right of voting a quorum shall consist of twenty members.

XII

The deliberations of the Society shall be conducted according to the provisions of Roberts' Rules of Order.

HOUSE RULES

GUESTS

1. No person eligible for active membership may be introduced into the Club-house.

2. No member of the University not a member of the Signet may be present at an initiation or a business meeting.

3. Members of the University not eligible for active membership may be introduced into the Club-house five times in any month; but such guests may be present at not more than one evening entertainment during the month, and at no initiation or business meeting.

4. Persons not connected with the University may be given the privileges of the Club-house for a period not exceeding one month, upon written application of a member to the House Committee.

5. All guests upon their introduction into the Club-house must be accompanied by the member introducing them, who shall register their names, his own, and the date in the Guest-book.

BILLS

1. All bills are due within ten days of their presentation. If after thirty days the account of a member is still unsettled, his name, together with the amount of his indebtedness, shall be posted on the bulletin-board.

2. No further credit shall be extended to a member whose name is posted.

3. At the end of two months from the time a member's name has been posted, he shall be suspended from all use and enjoyment of the Club-house until the debt is paid.

4. A man shall be considered to have resigned, and his name shall be dropped from the list of members, who after four months from the time his name has been posted is still in debt to the Club.

LIBRARY

1. No books, periodicals, or music may be taken from the Club-house.

2. Members after using books are requested to replace them on the shelves.

GIFTS

All gifts to the Club-house, exclusive of books, are subject to the approval of the House Committee.

KITCHEN

Members have not access to the kitchen, larders, or Steward's quarters in general, without the permission of the Steward.

Complaints and suggestions must be made in writing to the House Committee; anonymous communications will not be considered.

SIGNET ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

I. NAME AND OBJECT

This Association shall be called the Signet Alumni Association. Its object is to promote the interests of the Signet, a social and literary society in Harvard College.

II. COUNCIL

The affairs of the Association shall be under the control of a Council, ten in number, consisting in the first instance of the subscribers to the original agreement of association, who were appointed at a meeting of Signet Alumni and Undergraduates, June 16, 1884.

The persons constituting the Council shall be divided into five classes as they themselves may determine, each class to go out of office on the election of their successors. New members shall be chosen, two each year, for a term of five years at the annual meeting of the Association.

In electing members of the Council, each member of the Association shall have two votes, but no member shall cast more than one vote for the same candidate. All votes received by the Secretary through the mail from absent members shall be counted. Before the balloting begins, the names of all candidates who have received votes by mail shall be announced by the Secretary, but other nominations may be made viva voce. The two candidates having the largest number of votes shall be declared elected.

III. OFFICERS

The officers of the Association shall be a President and a Secretary-Treasurer.

IV. PRESIDENT

The President shall be elected by the Council for a term of five years, and shall be ex officio a member of the Council. Every graduate member shall be eligible for this office whether already a member of the Council or not.

V. SECRETARY-TREASURER

The Secretary-Treasurer shall be elected by the Council from among their own number for a term of one year. Except in case of special order he shall have custody of the funds, books, papers, and other property belonging to the Association.

VI. MEMBERSHIP

All Graduate and Honorary Members of the Signet Society may become members of the Association by signifying to the Secretary their desire to do so.

VII. MEETINGS OF THE COUNCIL

Stated meetings of the Council shall be held on the third Monday in October and the third Monday in May. Special meetings may be called at any time by the President, Secretary, or any two members. Notice of meetings shall be sent to all members of the Council. Meetings may be continued by adjournment.

VIII. QUORUM

Five members shall constitute a quorum at meetings of the Council.

IX. MEETINGS OF THE ASSOCIATION

There shall be an annual meeting of the Association, held as the Council may appoint.

X. AUDIT OF ACCOUNTS

The accounts of the Association shall be audited once a year by a committee of three elected at the annual meeting.

It was voted to instruct the Secretary to deposit the funds of the Association until further notice in the Charles River Bank.
